

FIVE-CENT FERRY

The Statue of Liberty stands on its sun-lit water path.

You get the taste of the wind, the sound of mighty engines throbbing beneath your feet, rolling water and whisperings of ports throughout the world. And it only costs a nickel.

You get a 25-minute ride, with a water-side view of the Statue of Liberty, the panoramic dance of seagulls chasing the foamy wake and mighty ships passing by with the help of churning tugs while, around you, is the sweeping view of New York's Upper Bay.

It is one of the lowest priced pleasure rides available in the country today—the Staten Island Ferry in New York City.

It doesn't matter when you arrive at the green-painted building at the tip of Manhattan; the ferryboats leave around the clock at 10-15 minute intervals. They carry people, animals, trucks, kids and food (if you want a snack).

Depending on when you make the ride to the borough of Richmond (Staten Island), you can walk decks touched with fog, snow, rain, wind, warmth or cold. You can almost see tidal currents coming at you from beyond the bridge spanning the pathway to the ocean.

The trip adds up to a money-loser for the City over the year, but the four million tourists who ride it spend money elsewhere and make it all worthwhile.

When you're in New York City and want to escape the concrete canyons and glass walls, the traffic of cars and people, listen closely for the next steam whistle and hop aboard: the Staten Island Ferry is ready for its next run.

In bad weather, there are many seats inside.

There is time to sleep, perchance to dream.

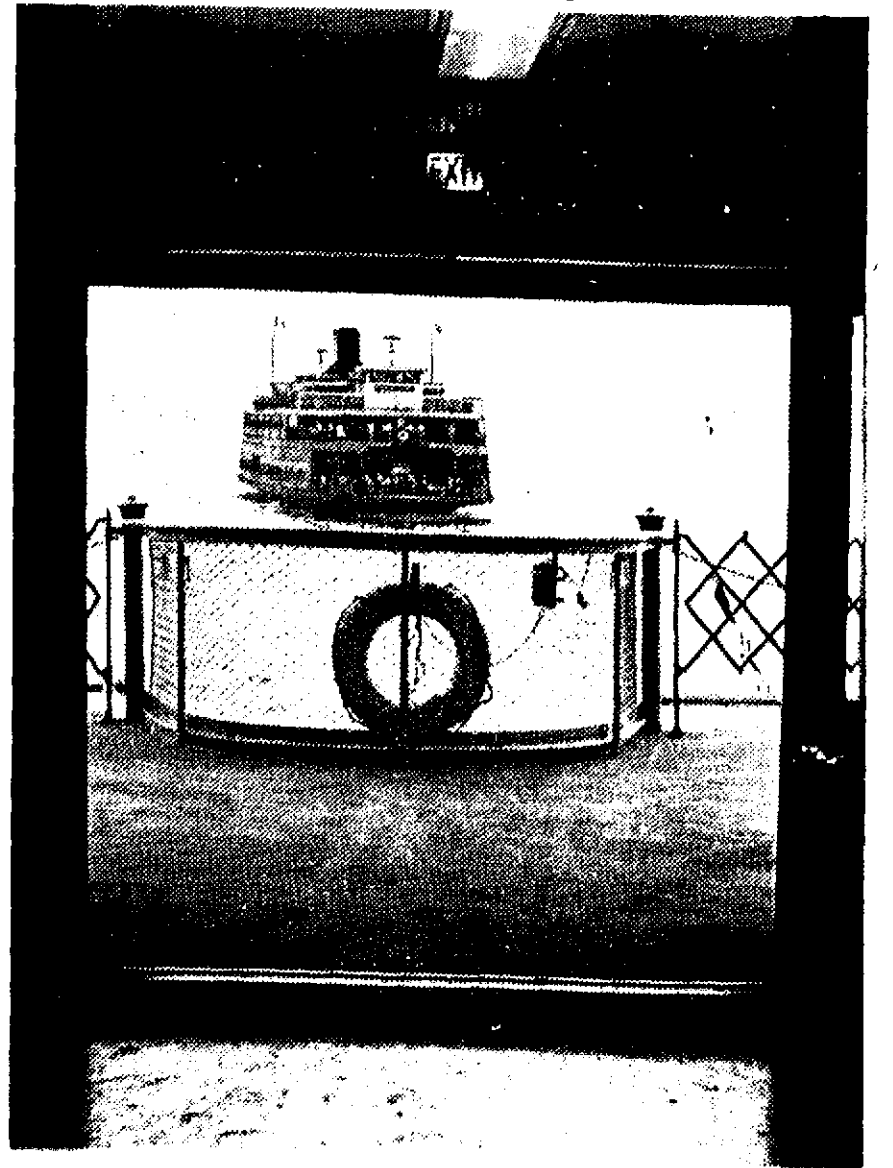

Looking towards a calling horizon.

Morning to night, there are always people watching and waiting.

Through the open door of one ferry, another is seen departing.

Youth Beat

Student Power: Students everywhere show their power and push. Stanford University, Columbia University, University of California at Berkeley and way across the sea. Students swelled the ranks of China's Red Guard; likewise, students rioted in Poland, caused trouble in London, overthrew a government in Indonesia and nearly overthrew one in West Berlin. Goes to show the elders of the world that youth will out, also that knowledge is power.

ISOLATION BOOTH: Late teens, precollege years, considered period of isolation. Kids make world of their own since they can't fit into the younger childish group or the older young adults group. Result? The in-between feeling alienates them from the adults' world and yet makes teens so unique and innovative. Solution? Some say you just have to take the good with the bad.

WHEELS AROUND: Bicycle riding has more than doubled since 1960. Kids riding for the joy of it? Nope. Adults riding for the health of it? Watch for "bikeways" in cities and towns all over the country. They're special, safe set-aside routes for cycling. Sounds "exciting!"

Skin of Our Teeth: Barnacle glue discovered to be an all-time adhesive for teeth! Will hopefully be used in future to anchor fillings in teeth. Anchors away!

SHIP AHOY OBOY! Want SS Independence seeks youth market. They've painted the ship like an unbelievable psychedelic face. Young cruises by which one can pay for the passage alone and then pay-as-you-go for the rest of the cruise are also beginning. Owners hope to take the old loopy stigma from cruises. What a way to go!

Drug Bug: Statistics show that LSD use is going down, but use of amphetamines—most taken intravenously—has risen. The latter is extremely dangerous. One terrific problem with drug use among teens is their deep-seated belief that most drug information disseminated by adults is false!

GENETIC CONTROL: It may be true that criminal tendencies of a sort are inherited. The male with xxy genes might be proved to be inherently predisposed to violence and mayhem. The normal male is xy—one female, one male chromosome. Time and further experiments will tell.

BEACH SET Fashionable out of the swim is summer's new set cover-up, the beach dress. A stylized floral print in sheer cotton is the choice for the high-necked dress with dainty necktie trim. At right, its water-loving companion, a two-piece hipster suit in the same fabric with decorative button detail. By Cole Jrs.

Today's hand is very much like yesterday's. South has exactly the same cards and North has the same except for the king of hearts instead of a small one.

The combination of an opening no-trump plus partner's 11 high card points is not likely to produce a slam and most pairs using ordinary methods would probably wind up in three no-trump.

The artificial bidding sequence shown in the box illustrates the scientific way to reach a slam.

North's two-spade bid shows a minor two suiter of indefinite strength. South's three club bid merely announces that his clubs are at least as good as his diamonds. North's three heart call shows help in hearts, if his partner wants to try three no-trump. It also infers a singleton spade and is a force to game.

South's bid of three spades happens to be a slam try. North can't be sure that it isn't saying South has spades stopped two or more times so North merely goes to three no-trump.

This puts it up to South once more and he bids four clubs. This shows that South's three spade call was a cue bid to show the ace and that South is definitely interested in a club slam.

North might jump to six clubs but he has been bitten by the science bug and bids four diamonds to show that ace. South replies with four hearts to show the ace of hearts and by this time North has had enough. He bids six clubs.

There is nothing to the play at six clubs. All South has to do is to knock out the ace of trumps, draw the rest of the trumps and spread his hand.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

At a tumor conference one afternoon recently, 37 D.T. (ear, nose and throat) MDs and one DDS met to discuss cancer of the sinus. The session lasted over an hour and treatment modality was reviewed in detail, including types of dental prostheses needed for post-op rehabilitation of patients.

Do you know what was the most impressive thing about this meeting? NO ONE SMOKED! Not one cigarette, cigar or pipe.

Think about that for a moment if you are a smoker.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: My daughter writes from college that her roommates threaten to kick her out unless she stops grinding her teeth at night. It wakes them up. What can be done about tooth grinding?

ANSWER: The simplest cure for the roommates is ear plugs. I wish I knew how to stop people from grinding their teeth. Almost everyone grinds or clenches or combines the two. It may be a reflection of these crises-ridden days and the hectic lives we

There's a theory that premature contact or a "high spot" on a tooth produces the urge to grind that spot. But bruxism, as it is called, is of unknown origin and it probably has multiple causes, not the least of which are emotional or psychogenic disturbances.

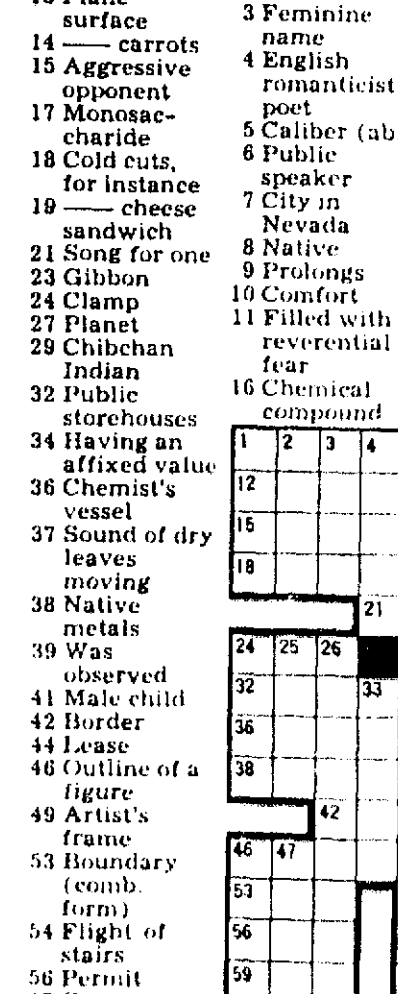

If grinding is due to disharmony in the way the teeth come together, it's possible to get relief by equilibrating the "bite," that is, spot grinding the teeth so that they fit together properly.

Relief can also be obtained by use of a bite plate. This is a clear plastic, thin plate, like prizefighters use, which is worn over the upper teeth at night. It acts as a splint for the upper teeth, holding them together, and as a bite plane for the lower teeth so that they can glide over the smooth surface, thus taking the pleasure out of grinding.

Grinding is harmful. It can break teeth, knock out fillings, loosen teeth, cause periodontal disease, and can destroy harmony in the hinge, causing them to snap and crack, and be painful and tender to touch.

Some dentists prescribe muscle relaxants or tranquilizers. These are excellent ameliorating agents but give only limited or temporary relief.

Attaway's Outdoor Notebook

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Woodchuck hunting is a long way from being a national pastime, but it is becoming an increasingly popular summer shooting sport. For many hunters, it's a sport in itself, but deer hunters (using lighter loads, of course) also indulge as a means of familiarizing themselves with their equipment.

Like deer, woodchucks are one wildlife species that has benefited from man's presence—particularly his agricultural activity. Originally woodland creatures, woodchucks moved out into open pasture land to be nearer favorite foods like clover and alfalfa. Not really a menace to farm crops, they're more of a persistent pest.

Down South, woodchucks are called groundhogs, and out West there's a close cousin called the rockchuck. All are members of the marmot family and distant cousins to the squirrel.

Woodchucks are true hibernators. They live in burrows in the ground and spend four to six months in a state of suspended animation—a deathlike sleep where the pulse rate drops to about seven an hour and all bodily functions are suspended. (Bears, on the other hand, merely sleep, waking frequently and even giving birth to and suckling young.)

A woodchuck may not go back to sleep if he sees his own shadow in early spring, but he'll dive back into his hole if he sees yours. They have extraordinary eyesight and are very wary.

Hunting chucks, therefore, becomes a sport of long-range shooting. They may be stalked, using elbows and toes to push you along and freezing whenever the chuck looks your way. Or, you may take a position behind cover (brush pile, rocks, etc.) and wait patiently for the chucks to emerge.

In both cases, good chuck territory usually is scouted with binoculars or spotting scopes.

Some states classify chucks as game animals and have regulated seasons, but in most states they are not protected. Late summer is the favorite hunting season for two reasons—many hunters do not shoot until after the breeding season, and chucks tend to hole up in wet spring weather.

Many a farm boy has gone chuck hunting with a .22 rifle, but it takes a head or spine shot to stop one of these creatures with such a light load. Most hunters prefer the smaller centerfire calibers.

A scope is essential. This may range from a 4x on your favorite deer rifle to the classic 10x varmint scope.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The late Tony Bettenhausen, two-time winner of the national driving championship, and mechanic Jean Mercenier were named Tuesday to auto racing's Hall of Fame.

Then Al Downing, a lefthander, started his first game in Oakland one night, got into trouble in the first inning, and Monbouquette came on to shut out the Athletics the rest of the way. He has been a starting pitcher again ever since.

"I feel now like I did in '63," he said. "I like to get to the park early and think about the game. I start preparing days before. I know I'm going to work every four or five days. For instance, I pitched in Chicago, so I figured I'd be facing Cleveland. I started checking Indian box scores to see which batter is hot, how I might pitch around him. I'm like a little kid. Every day I can't wait to get to the park."

Then he added soberly: "It's not an easy game."

He could have said it a year ago, too.

Watch Your

Language,

Sports Fan

By IRA BERKOW

NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The influence of sports terms on the English language are well-known and widely used in areas other than the athletic field, gymnasiums and other sweatshops. Just listen to some of our politicians, seeking the common man's ground, for graphic examples:

"We've got to play ball with..."

"Caught flat-footed"

"Pinch-hit"

"To get in one's innings"

"To warm up"

"To be caught napping"

"Pitch him a curve"

On the other glove, some politicians are called "screwballs."

English-language sports terms also have been gaining yardage in other languages. Dr. Mario Pei, author of many books on linguistics, including "The Story of Language" and "The Story of the English Language," has kept score of this phenomenon.

"If English is ever accepted as a universal language," he said, "it will be due almost as much to America's predominance in sports as to our leadership in trade."

"Baseball terminology in particular has had a greater influence on explaining the American way of life abroad than all of our direct cultural propaganda."

Pei said that the Japanese especially have been influenced by baseball. They have incorporated many English baseball words into their language.

"The Japanese acquired a great admiration for America because of baseball," he said. "The game really caught on there. When Gen. Dolittle flew over Tokyo early in the second World War, he said he passed over innumerable baseball fields."

"But the game was forbidden during the war. And on Banzai charges the Japanese thought they were hurtling terrible results upon the Americans by shouting, 'To hell with Babe Ruth.'"

English has fielded many French terms, but the Gauls also have racked up many of ours. It got so bad that a Frenchman wrote a book deploring the Statue of Liberty play.

"A good example of the French invading English is the word 'groggy,' taken from prize fighting. I remember the first time I heard it was on a French record about wine, women and song. It was pronounced 'grog-GEE.' I could not figure it out. I had the song transcribed. Then I asked a Frenchman who was a sports fan about it. He said, 'You know the word, like when you're out on your feet—either in the ring or from too much merry-making.'"

Of course, the game is played on both sides. English sports words often come from foreign fields. "From Italian," said Pei, "comes the word 'sport' from disporto. The French took the Italian word 'racchetta' and made it racket. Tennis is a French word. And the tennis term 'love' meaning zero is corrupted French. It was originally 'l'oeuf' meaning egg. Rodeo is of Spanish origin and means 'going around.' The Palestra, the sports palace in Philadelphia, is the literal Italian word for gymnasium."

Sometimes, English expressions as used by Britishers, need translation in American. Pei's favorite is a sentence by George Bernard Shaw when he was a young sports writer covering a prize fight. Shaw wrote: "Push on the boko napped your footman's left."

"It means," said Pei, "the fighter rapped his opponent square on the nose."

Shaw was no man to pull his punch. He hit straight from the shoulder, with some fancy footwork thrown in.

Between You'n' Me

BY MURRAY OLDERMAN
SPORTS EDITOR
NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSOCIATION

NEW YORK—(NEA)—A year ago this time, Bill Monbouquette was an unemployed pitcher in West Medford, Mass., with gray at his temples, a bald spot on top and a future you couldn't even call limited.

And now he's the most effective pitcher in the American League—the earned-run averages prove it, with a yield of a fraction more than one run per game and four victories the first month for the New York Yankees.

It all changed because Bill—or Mombo, as the players call him—was driving to Fenway Park in Boston on May 31, 1967, and happened to stop at a gas station in West Medford.

Bill had been out of work for three weeks and, since he had pitched eight full seasons for the Boston Red Sox, kept in shape by pitching batting practice and running in the outfield at Fenway Park.

At the gas station, waiting for the tank in his Volkswagen to fill, Mombo picked up a newspaper, turned ritually to the sports page and saw one of those small items at the bottom of a column. The New York Yankees, on a road trip, had sent Whitey Ford home with a bad arm.

He immediately fished out change and called Lee MacPhail, general manager of the Yankees, in New York to see if they could use a 30-year-old right-handed pitcher who was still devoted to playing baseball. MacPhail told him to keep on going to the ball park, that he was trying to get waivers on a couple of players. "I'll call you back in a couple of hours," promised MacPhail.

Monbouquette, who had sent telegrams to 17 clubs in the major leagues and called the general managers of most of them, without any results, wasn't counting on it.

"But he did call back," said Phil, "and he signed me right away."

And the bitterness hasn't quite dissipated at the cold shoulder he received from baseball, a guy who had won 20 games in 1963 and never suffered a sore arm.

"I was 30," he mused, "and I guess they figured I was too old. First thing they'd ask me, 'How much money you making?'"

"They were, what would you say, penny-wise and pound-foolish. I felt I could still pitch, or I would have quit right then. At the time, though, my confidence was shot. Every mistake I made pitching, I got the bleep kicked out of me."

"At Detroit in the spring (Note: the Tigers released him unconditionally on May 10), I finally realized I had to change my style. I was darning batters with the high fast one, like I did when I was a kid, and getting the bleep kicked out of me."

"So I changed the grip on my fast ball. I hold it with the seams instead of across. And now I've got my fast ball running and sinking low to the outside."

With the Yankees, he also regained his pride and a decent salary. The Tigers had offered to let him spend the summer in Toledo at $1,200 a month for the four remaining months of the season. Mombo was a pitcher who'd been making more than $30,000 a year.

He won a half dozen games for the Yankees, with a fine earned-run average of 2.36, and came back this spring with no illusions. The Yankees would use him as a spot relief pitcher. Manager Ralph Houk told him the second week of the season that he'd be in the bullpen as the "long" man and maybe go to the "short" chores in the late innings of games if he did well.

Then Al Downing, a lefthander, started his first game in Oakland one night, got into trouble in the first inning, and Monbouquette came on to shut out the Athletics the rest of the way. He has been a starting pitcher again ever since.

"I feel now like I did in '63," he said. "I like to get to the park early and think about the game. I start preparing days before. I know I'm going to work every four or five days. For instance, I pitched in Chicago, so I figured I'd be facing Cleveland. I started checking Indian box scores to see which batter is hot, how I might pitch around him. I'm like a little kid. Every day I can't wait to get to the park."

Then he added soberly: "It's not an easy game."

He could have said it a year ago, too.

Watch Your Language, Sports Fan

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The influence of sports terms on the English language are well-known and widely used in areas other than the athletic field, gymnasiums and other sweatshops. Just listen to some of our politicians, seeking the common man's ground, for graphic examples:

"We've got to play ball with..."

"Caught flat-footed"

"Pinch-hit"

"To get in one's innings"

"To warm up"

"To be caught napping"

"Pitch him a curve"

On the other glove, some politicians are called "screwballs."

English-language sports terms also have been gaining yardage in other languages. Dr. Mario Pei, author of many books on linguistics, including "The Story of Language" and "The Story of the English Language," has kept score of this phenomenon.

"If English is ever accepted as a universal language," he said, "it will be due almost as much to America's predominance in sports as to our leadership in trade."

"Baseball terminology in particular has had a greater influence on explaining the American way of life abroad than all of our direct cultural propaganda."

Pei said that the Japanese especially have been influenced by baseball. They have incorporated many English baseball words into their language.

"The Japanese acquired a great admiration for America because of baseball," he said. "The game really caught on there. When Gen. Dolittle flew over Tokyo early in the second World War, he said he passed over innumerable baseball fields."

"But the game was forbidden during the war. And on Banzai charges the Japanese thought they were hurtling terrible results upon the Americans by shouting, 'To hell with Babe Ruth.'"

English has fielded many French terms, but the Gauls also have racked up many of ours. It got so bad that a Frenchman wrote a book deploring the Statue of Liberty play.

"A good example of the French invading English is the word 'groggy,' taken from prize fighting. I remember the first time I heard it was on a French record about wine, women and song. It was pronounced 'grog-GEE.' I could not figure it out. I had the song transcribed. Then I asked a Frenchman who was a sports fan about it. He said, 'You know the word, like when you're out on your feet—either in the ring or from too much merry-making.'"

Of course, the game is played on both sides. English sports words often come from foreign fields. "From Italian," said Pei, "comes the word 'sport' from disporto. The French took the Italian word 'racchetta' and made it racket. Tennis is a French word. And the tennis term 'love' meaning zero is corrupted French. It was originally 'l'oeuf' meaning egg. Rodeo is of Spanish origin and means 'going around.' The Palestra, the sports palace in Philadelphia, is the literal Italian word for gymnasium."

Sometimes, English expressions as used by Britishers, need translation in American. Pei's favorite is a sentence by George Bernard Shaw when he was a young sports writer covering a prize fight. Shaw wrote: "Push on the boko napped your footman's left."

"It means," said Pei, "the fighter rapped his opponent square on the nose."

Shaw was no man to pull his punch. He hit straight from the shoulder, with some fancy footwork thrown in.

Graham Hill— Man in Hurry

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEA Sports Editor

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(NEA)—Graham Hill, an Englishman in a hurry, was the first man in history to cruise around the two-and-a-half miles of the Indianapolis motor speedway at an average speed of more than 170 miles an hour.

He did it in one of those fire-engine turbine jobs that slope forward in the shape of a door stop and swoosh silently down the track like a quick gust of wind.

"You're going so fast," said Graham, "the feel of acceleration or power isn't impressive. It feels like the front wheels are clawing at the ground. You're sitting on a wild thing."

It's precisely this feeling of exotic rage a man can produce with a machine which appeals to Hill, who wears a pencil mustache under a straight, sharp nose and straight, swept-back brown hair that trails raggedly at the back of his neck—the only disorderly symptom about him. Graham has been the world's champion driver and a winner of the Indianapolis 500 in 1966.

His pursuit of speed has added another dimension. Graham also flies.

"A Peep, as the French call it," said Graham, and then explained that it was actually an American plane, the Piper Aztec. "It's directly the result of winning two years ago here. I made a lot of money one day and spent it the next."

The evening before he broke the 170 m.p.h. barrier at Indianapolis, Graham zoomed over the city for an hour in a friend's plane just for the kick of being unchained from the natural boundaries of man.

He's very philosophical about the whole bit.

"I have discovered two entirely new sensations in my life, time," he said. "One is speed, the other is flying. The other sensations we've had since Adam and Eve. I feel exceedingly fortunate."

"The feeling of flying is the same as in driving—you're controlling a machine—but there is also a great sense of liberty when you take off. With the restrictions of the society we're living in, increasingly, you like the freedom it gives you."

"When you're up there, nonchalantly buzzing around, you look down and say to yourself, 'well now, there's a nice garden... that's a bloody marvelous swimming pool.'"

"I feel free like a bird. Speaking of birds..."

His mustache twitched upwards at the corners and a faint smile deepened the lines at the corner of his eyes. Graham didn't feel the need to explain that among colloquial Britons, birds also light on two feet, but they don't spread wings to fly. And in Graham's locale they're generally sheathed in micro-minis and high boots on their shanks.

But business is business, and the night before he went out to qualify for his year's Indianapolis 500, Graham read himself to sleep. He finished a book, "Topaz," by Leon Uris.

Then he got up and before noon and a quarter of a million fascinated spectators, he set a times trial record of 171.208 miles per hour for the four laps, which lasted just four hours until Joe Leonard (also driving a turbine) broke it.

"I have an ugly feeling," Graham had speculated, "some unmentionable is going to do it a little quicker. This circuit is ideally suited to the gas turbine and four-wheel drive."

The world of Graham Hill, however, moves too fast to allow real disappointment. He left immediately that same afternoon to fly to England and test a new formula 4 car the next day on an old used bomber field outside London. Then he'd fly to Monaco for the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo, after which he'd zip back to Indianapolis in time for the carburetion trials at the motor speedway preceding the 500-mile extravaganza on Memorial Day.

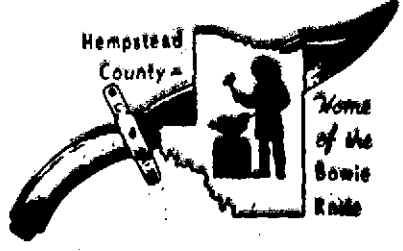

"With the schedules," pronounced "shed-yewis" by Graham, "flying around Europe has become essential for a racing driver. It saves a lot of time and tension."

So does having a turbine to race that can go 170 miles an hour. It made him the first man to qualify for this year's Indy 500. A year ago, at this time, he was almost the last and quickly dropped out of the actual race later.

"I was having to stay here another week," he grimaced. "It was dreadful. It was a bloody nightmare."

It was, in other

Necklaced Newsmen

White House visitors needn't get alarmed over the necklaced newsmen wandering the halls. The Capitol press corps hasn't given in to the flower children craze. It's a new policy initiated by the Johnson administration apparently to tell the good guys from the bad.

The Wall Street Journal reports that reporters are chafing under the new order that they must wear their identification cards on chains around their necks. The press apparently has been mixing too well at official functions and, obviously, that must stop.

Recently the American Society of Newspaper Editors charged that the Johnson administration followed a practice of "obscure-ism for its own sake." Apparently, the administration wants a further advantage over the press and the necklace is a fine way to know when to shut up.

Presumably, if the necklace doesn't stop news leaks, reporters will be required to wear flowers behind their ears or some such thing. That sight would be enough to leave almost anyone speechless. — Dallas (Tex.) Morning News

The Miscalculation

There have been so many references in print in the last week or so about the loquacious tendencies of Vice President Humphrey, we had supposed that a prime job for his campaign staff would be—well, to find a way tactfully of cutting him off.

But apparently, Hubert recognizes his habit and has decided that he (and the public) will just have to live with it.

We come to this conclusion after being told about the time the Vice President addressed a White House News Photographers Association dinner. Said he, by way of preface: "The Chinese say one picture is worth 10,000 words. Good heavens! Think what I could have achieved if I had been a photographer!" — Huntsville (Ala.) Times

Big Daddy's Secret

How did he do it? "I just gave up everything that was worthwhile." — Montgomery (Ala.) Journal

Tobacco Tax Proposals Endorsed

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Two of the three tobacco products tax proposals placed in the special session by Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller surprisingly received endorsements from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Thursday—at least, amended versions did.

Committee Chairman Ray Smith of Hot Springs called for separate votes on the bill and the amended versions with a pair of 15 per cent excise taxes on wholesale prices drawing "do pass as amended" recommendations.

However, the governor's proposed 20 per cent increase on the cigarette tax went out with a "do not pass" recommendation, as did the amended version of the bill.

Generally speaking the amendments to all three measures changed the division of the revenue.

Rockefeller's two excise tax bills earmarked the revenues for the state penitentiary system until an appropriation of $1.8 million was met. The amendments earmarked 50 per cent for prisons and the remainder for general revenues.

The cigarette tax proposal was earmarked for public schools and higher education. The amendment to the cigarette bill called for 50 per cent of the revenue to go to higher education and the remainder to general revenues.

McKee Placed on Leave Indefinitely

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Maj. Kenneth McKee, former commander of the Highway Patrol, was placed on indefinite leave of absence Thursday at the recommendation of State Police Director Ralph D. Scott.

The action was taken by the State Police Commission, which said McKee could be reinstated at his request upon the recommendation of the director and the concurrence of the commission.

Capt. Bill Walker of Newport was promoted to major, transferred to Little Rock and placed in command of the Highway Patrol.

McKee was placed on sick leave April 15 by Scott after he learned that McKee had been arrested in Missouri and charged with driving while intoxicated.

McKee said Wednesday that he was guilty of careless and imprudent driving.

The commission said McKee was no longer on the payroll and that he had turned in his State Police property.

Regarding possible reinstatement, Scott said, "Either I or a subsequent director will meet the problem... when and if it arises."

Scott added, "I was not asked for a commitment nor have I made one. I hope the matter is closed."

Shortly after McKee was placed on sick leave, Scott and Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller revealed that McKee had undergone a neurological examination in New York with the arrangements having been made by the governor.

PSC Approves AP&L Request

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansas Power & Light Co.'s request for authority to spend $690,000 on a 12.2-mile, 161,000-volt transmission line was approved Thursday by the state Public Service Commission.

The line would connect AP&L's proposed nuclear energy plant at London to an existing substation near Russellville.

Wants Early Trial of Asphalt Case

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Kenneth Coffelt, a Little Rock lawyer, asked the Arkansas Supreme Court Thursday to grant an early trial of a $3 million taxpayer's suit that charges five oil companies with price-fixing in asphalt sales to the state Highway Commission.

Coffelt, in the petition, charged that the commission and Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell were trying to deny his client, G. D. Nelson, his day in court.

The state has attempted to block trial in the state courts until its trial of the issues under the Sherman Anti-trust Act is completed in U.S. District Court.

Purcell and the commission contend that trial in the state court could jeopardize the federal case.

Man Held in Connection With Slaying

PARAGOULD, Ark. (AP) — George Shelton, 59, of near Light (Greene County) was being held in county jail here today in connection with the slaying of his son-in-law, Zeb Price, 37, a native of Mountain View.

Authorities said Price was shot and killed Thursday night at Shelton's home. Officers said no charges had been filed.

Coroner Jack Tyler has called an inquest this afternoon into the death.

Supermarket in Nairobi Surprising

By C. C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A visit to Nairobi's "supermarket" would surprise American housewives who think of Africa in terms of noisy animals, strange languages and dark jungles.

Gourmets priding themselves on exotic dishes from distant lands at high prices would find Nairobi's supermarket has plenty of variety, and often at lower prices than in America.

More than two dozen countries from around the world are represented in the imported foods.

A sign offers "Italian specialties." And on one shelf is a packaged lasagna dinner from Milton, Pa.

The diet-conscious can find five flavors of Metreol, and custard mixes not only from Kenya but also from Montreal, Scotland, and White Plains, N.Y. There are cleansers from Cheshire, Scotland, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Elephant Soap Factory Ltd., Nairobi.

Pushing a cart along the well lighted aisles, one is likely to pass a Norwegian, a U.S. Peace Corps worker, a diplomat from Communist China; road builders from Italy; and housewives from more than two dozen countries.

African women in colorful printed dresses, often with a baby on their backs in a sling, and Asian women in flowing saris mingle with expatriates in walking shorts.

The selective shopper, with plenty of time, can save money. The East African shilling is worth roughly 14 U.S. cents. A 20 ounce can of grapefruit sections from Tel Aviv goes for 3.5 shillings. The same sized tin of the same item— from Machakos, Kenya— sells for 2.60.

The American housewife finds meat, fruit, and vegetables cheaper than back home but the food bill is about the same due to efforts to maintain the family's normal diet.

New Push by Enemy on Saigon

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — New fighting broke out on Saigon's northern fringes today as South Vietnamese marines and U.S. helicopter gunships moved against Viet Cong forces possibly threatening another offensive against the capital.

Enemy soldiers holed up in huts on both sides of the Binh Loi bridge 2½ miles from the heart of Saigon. Estimates of their number ranged from 100 to 400. Vietnamese tanks set up a blockade at a key road junction leading into Saigon.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Command announced that enemy gunners downed two American fighter-bombers and two helicopters over South Vietnam in the last 24 hours. Three crewmen were killed, four were wounded and one was rescued uninjured.

The losses brought to 266 the number of planes and to 705 the number of helicopters reported down in combat over South Vietnam.

Hundreds of civilians, a few of them wounded, streamed into downtown Saigon from their homes in the area of the fresh fighting northeast of Saigon. Several heavy clashes have erupted in the area since the Viet Cong launched their lunar new year offensive Jan. 31. The enemy launched a second, smaller-scale attack May 5.

The new fighting coincided with reports from police sources that elements of two Viet Cong regiments had infiltrated into Saigon's northern suburbs with heavy mortars, rockets and anti-aircraft weapons. Authorities imposed a 24-hour curfew on northern Saigon.

Rocket-firing U.S. Army helicopter gunships were called in after one South Vietnamese marine battalion reported 15 men wounded in the first 10 minutes of fighting southwest of the bridge.

Earlier today, the Viet Cong attacked a U.S. 9th Infantry Division patrol at the Y bridge on Saigon's southern edge, scene of major fighting after the enemy's May 5 drive.

First Test on Spending Cut Near

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of President Johnson's top economic advisers now appear willing to accept $6 billion in spending cuts as the price for higher taxes if that's the best bargain they can strike.

Of the top four, only Budget Bureau Director Charles S. Zwick is still firmly committed to no more than $4 billion in spending cuts—a position taken by the President.

The first test vote on the compromise package worked out by Senate-House negotiators will come next week.

Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., plans to offer a resolution Wednesday instructing House negotiators to resume meeting with their Senate colleagues and to insist on spending cuts of $4 billion.

The negotiators have already worked up a formula calling for $6 billion in cuts— which Johnson contends is too much—and the 10 per cent income tax surcharge requested by the President.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee said Thursday he expects the House to pass the compromise as it now stands "when all the fanfare is over." He thinks Burke's motion will fail.

Whatever the outcome, some key voices in the administration are now ready to accept Mills' plan just to get the surcharge.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler has already endorsed the compromise package.

And only this week, James S. Duesenberry, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, said although $6 billion in spending cuts goes too far the over-all package would benefit the nation.

Eons Ago Fire Was Discovered, Man Been Burning Since

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Eons ago a primitive man first discovered the wonder of fire. Since that day, mankind has reaped innumerable benefits from his discovery. Yet it has been a costly one in terms of the natural resources, property, and lives destroyed by fire.

It may surprise you to know that medical authorities have classified burns as the greatest single hazard of childhood. The most tragic aspect of this is that 80 per cent of all burns result from preventable accidents. But this is not instruction on fire prevention. It is a ray of hope for burns victims, especially children.

That hope comes from the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, an organization long noted for helping children in need. Last Sunday, May 19, was Shrine Hospital Sunday for 19 such hospitals for crippled children—15 in the continental United States, 2 in Canada, 1 in Hawaii, and 1 in Mexico. (The first of these hospitals was opened in nearby Shreveport in September of 1922.)

In 1922 the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine allocated $10 million to build 3 Shriner Burns Institutes as an extension of the organization's philanthropic work in the field of orthopedics. The reason for this decision was simple.

Medical men rate children's burns as one of the most poorly treated conditions in medicine due, in part, to the enormous expense associated with complicated burn care. Where 40 per cent of the body surface is burned, treatment usually costs between $10,000 and $15,000 per patient.

The prolonged and intensive treatment required in severe burns cases, and the lengthy convalescence period requiring extensive physical therapy, make it difficult to treat severely burned patients in a general hospital without special facilities. Adult victims frequently receive better care than children because the adult injuries usually occur in lines of work where funds are available through worker's compensation.

To help solve this complex problem the Shriners designed their Burns Institutes for: (1) Save the lives of severely burned children and restore their bodies through extensive care; (2) Undertake research to advance medicine's ability to care for and treat children who have been burned; and (3) Instruct medical personnel in the care and treatment of burned children.

As in the Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children, each Burns Institute is run entirely on a charitable basis. Each contains 30 beds and has an annual operating budget of over $1.5 million.

Where are these Shriners Burns Institutes located? The first was opened in March of 1926 in Galveston; the next in May of 1927 in Cincinnati; and this spring of 1968 the most recent one was opened in Boston.

Who may go to these hospitals for treatment? Children of any race or religion under 15 years of age, whose parents are unable to pay for hospitalization or out-patient treatment, are admitted. The admissions procedure is the same for all patients — there must be the reasonable possibility that the treatment will benefit the child. Infants, only a few weeks old, are admitted regularly, particularly to the clinics, with parents taking them home after each visit.

How can a person apply for admission? Any Shriner can provide a prospective patient with an application. If the application is approved instructions will be sent to the parents or guardian. The staffs of the hospitals only ask for the parents' or guardian's understanding.

The more than $113 million spent for operating expenses alone since the hospitals first opened in 1922 has come from many Shriners and non-Shriners and by various activities such as Shrine football games, athletic events of all sorts, and the ever popular Shrine circuses.

Volunteers Seek Body in River

MARKED TREE, Ark. (AP) — Volunteers were searching the St. Francis River today for the body of Larry Bratton, 17, of Marked Tree, who drowned while swimming Thursday afternoon.

Authorities said he was swimming with two companions who said Bratton swam about halfway across the river and then turned back. They said he then yelled for help before going under.

Bratton, a student at the Delta Vocational Technical School, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay C. Bratton.

Tests Changed to Aid Negro

NORTH LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Personnel Director Marvin Gullett of North Little Rock said Thursday that the city's recruit tests for the police and fire departments are being simplified to give Negroes and other minority groups a better chance of attaining a passing score.

He said the tests would be shortened from 200 questions to 100 and that sentences would be made shorter and simple words would be substituted for more difficult terms.

Gullett cited such changes as "supervisor" becoming "boss," "shortcoming" becoming "fault" and "most appropriate" becoming "best."

U.S. Steps Up Pressure in Talks

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent
PARIS (AP) — The United States intends to step up pressure on Hanoi's negotiators in the Paris talks to admit that thousands of North Vietnamese troops are fighting in South Vietnam.

"How can we ever get anywhere in these discussions," said one official, "if we can't even agree on the basic facts we have to deal with."

North Vietnam has up to now denounced any suggestions that it had forces in the South.

Some experts here believe North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong may have made a basic move toward a concession on that point Friday when he said in a speech in Hanoi: "Wherever the enemy exists our Vietnamese people have the right to go there and fight him."

This stopped short of admitting that northern troops had gone into the South but provided a basis for such a concession later—probably much later.

U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Xuan Thuy, the North Vietnamese representative, will meet again Monday after a four-day recess, to open their third week of talks. But U.S. authorities are now predicting heavy enemy offensive thrusts and more hard fighting in South Vietnam as the Communists strive to strengthen their position at the conference table.

That position at the moment is a very tough one, and so is the American stand.

Thuy says the United States must end all attacks against the North unconditionally. Harriman says the Hanoi government must cut back its infiltration of men and supplies into the South.

At this point, in Harriman's view, the issue of North Vietnamese troops in the South becomes acute. If North Vietnam persists in covering up its presence there with virtual denials, how can it deal with the U.S. demand to stop sending down so many men.

U.S. estimates have put the number of North Vietnamese fighting men in the South at around 85,000. The United States not only wants to reduce the flow of replacements or reinforcements, it also wants to get North Vietnamese agreement in any final peace settlement to pull all its troops out.

From the U.S. point of view the infiltration problem is at the heart of the present phase of talks, just as the end of the bombing is the key problem in Hanoi's view.

Harriman and Thuy are slowly moving toward a showdown over the issue. President Johnson said in Washington Thursday that he would not allow any defeat in the field to make a mockery of the talks here.

A North Vietnamese spokesman attacked U.S. good faith at a Paris news conference Friday saying that the United States was intensifying the war while talking a great deal about negotiating for peace.

He attacked Harriman as "perfidious and obstinate," prompting U.S. spokesman William J. Jordan to reply: "We don't feel we're obstinate. We know we're not perfidious."

Jordan added, "The sooner we stop throwing adjectives around and come to grips with real issues, the sooner we'll get something done."

In his Hanoi speech, Pham Van Dong said Thuy would stand firm in Paris on his government's terms for peace. The statement, taken literally, seemed to rule out any progress in negotiations here. But U.S. officials rejected any suggestion the talks were doomed and so did North Vietnamese spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le.

Calvary Baptist Church School

Calvary Baptist Church announces its vacation Bible school will begin on Monday, May 27, and continue through Friday, May 31. Classes are provided for all children ages 3 through 16 years. The school will be from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. daily. Parents must have been set for Friday at 7:30 p.m.
